the IRON CROWN

(Original.)
"What news of the king, doctor?" asked the prime minister of the court physician.
"His melancholy is distressing. He must be watched constantly to prevent self destruction."
"Can nothing be done for him?"
"I'm I've been thinking. All depends upon the success of some experiments now being made in Paris in similar cases. They are trying magnetism, electricity and hypnosis for such cases. It is reported that several patients have been relieved by the experiments. I can apply the same remedy to the king if you desire it."
"Do so at once."
A fortnight later Dr. Bachrach reported to the prime minister that the king's reason was quite restored. Indeed, so improved was he that the watch set over him to prevent his taking his life had been discontinued.
"Would it be safe for him to appear in public?" asked the minister.
"I am sure he is now safe," Prince Carl is scheming to place himself on the throne."
"If his majesty were to be unduly excited at present I fear he would suffer a relapse."
The minister, disappointed, dismissed the doctor and set himself to discover some other method of controlling the people that the king was still living. Prince Carl was the king's cousin, a man who could rule or ruin. Prince Fritz, the king's brother, a year younger than the king and very like him in appearance, was the heir apparent. It was known that the moment the king died there would be trouble in the succession. Prince Carl having declared that he would himself succeed the existing monarch. Fortunately, on the king's accession Carl had been forced to sign an agreement not to claim the throne during the sovereign's lifetime. One morning Dr. Bachrach asked for an immediate audience with the prime minister and when admitted announced that the king had relapsed and before he could be prevented had killed himself. The minister turned pale.
"We are all lost!" he exclaimed.
"Carl will seize the government and banish or execute every one who has opposed him. Heaven knows how he will get rid of his cousin Fritz."
The minister gave strict orders to keep the king's death a secret as long as possible and ordered troops upon whom he could rely from remote regions, where they were stationed, to the capital. But they could not be transported in less than ten days. A week after the king's death Prince Carl got wind of it. At the head of some troops stationed near by and who were favorable to him, accompanied also by a mob of his adherents, he marched to the palace and demanded to see the king. The prime minister, to delay matters, stepped out on to a balcony and declared that the king's condition was such that if he appeared it would be at the risk of his life. The mob howled and still demanded that he be brought forth, some shouting, "The king is dead—long live King Carl!" But Carl, who believed the game was all in his hands, would not risk breaking his agreement. He demanded proof of the king's death.
Dr. Bachrach had caused to be made an iron crown, which he magnetized and had little difficulty in persuading the king to wear it. Soon began to appear that in the king's case the results of the experiments in Paris were being confirmed. He grew so much better that the crown was removed, and Dr. Bachrach took care that it should be kept free from contact with any other substance. While the mob was howling the doctor placed the crown on the head of Prince Fritz. Now, the results of the Paris experiments were this: A magnetized iron crown placed on the head of a woman suffering from melancholy gave relief. Two weeks later the casket, which had been placed on the head of a man suffering from hysteria. He was hypnotized and immediately conducted himself after the manner of a woman who had previously worn the casket.
As soon as the crown, which, more readily touch the king's fancy, had been made in the same fashion as the crown of state, had been placed on Prince Fritz's head Dr. Bachrach sent for a celebrated hypnotizer, and Fritz was put under his influence. It was at this juncture that Carl made a demand for proof that the king was dead. The minister stood paralyzed, and the minister stood paralyzed, and the minister stood paralyzed. "The king is dead—long live Prince Carl!" was making a rush to storm the palace when Dr. Bachrach led forth Prince Fritz.
Fortunately the balcony was so high that the people could not discover the deception. They would not have been convinced, however, had not the prince unconsciously acted after the lead of his brother while he had worn the iron crown, and had not the attendants caught him he would have plunged headlong from the balcony. Prince Carl, satisfied with his identity, withdrew his followers, intending to take steps to have the insane monarch declared unfit to rule and consequently the same as dead. But the next day the troops began to arrive, and as soon as a sufficient number were on hand to guard the palace it was announced that the king was dead and Fritz was proclaimed.
What was the kingdom referred to and who were the real characters could not be given without revealing state secrets which have been remarkably well kept. But an account of the experiments made in Paris can at any time be perused by one sufficiently interested in the subject to hunt it up.
ELLEN T. PARKER.

"You appear ill at ease," said the young lady. "Are you ill?"
"No," answered the young man, "but you know how sensitive and nervous I am, and I'm in agony for fear that your little brother here will repeat some of the remarks you've made about me."—Indianaapolis Sun.

A SNOW EXPERIMENT.

Frozen Vapor From the Action of Sulphide of Carbon.
Two solid bodies, one yellow, sulphur, the other black, carbon, unite under certain circumstances to form a colorless liquid called sulphide of carbon, which must be handled with much precaution on account of its great explosive property. The soluble property of sulphide of carbon renders it valuable to take spots off garments. If its odor is more disagreeable than that of benzine or turpentine, it has at least the advantage of being dispelled quickly in consequence of the prompt evaporation of the liquid. Then is nothing to it to take off spots of paint on clothes. It does not do it, however, without creating great fear in persons who use it for the first time, for they see on the very place where, to their great pleasure, the paint had disappeared a large white spot, the nature of which is hard for them to define, and the more they brush the more unsightly and the larger that white spot grows. Is then the garment lost? No, for fortunately after a few moments the spot melts away never to show again. It was snow and nothing more. The sulphide of carbon in evaporating takes heat from the cloth and surrounding air, and the result of that is a sudden lowering of temperature sufficient to freeze the vapor of the atmosphere.
Without operating on your clothes you may make the experiment in the following way: Fill a small vial with sulphide of carbon, taking great care to do it far from any flame or heated stove. Then close the bottle with a cork stopper through which you have previously placed a small hole. In this hole place a piece of blotting paper made up into a small roll. The paper must reach to the bottom of the bottle and about an inch above the cork. Within fifteen minutes you will see the outside of this paper covered with snow, the quantity of which gradually increases. The liquid has risen through the pores of the paper as the oil of a lamp through the wick. When it gets to the open air it evaporates, and water contained in the surrounding atmosphere, being brought to a temperature below 32 degrees, has been frozen. If you divide the paper outside of the bottle into several pieces you obtain flowers and most charming effects. You may make the experiment in summer and in the full rays of the sun. The result will be obtained then more promptly, evaporation being more abundant.

First Stages Made in Pennsylvania.
"The first stage was made by hand in the wilds of Pennsylvania," said a tobacco man of Allegheny City.

"The story which they tell once in awhile in West Virginia and which must be true is that the long cheroots derived their name from the town of Conestoga, Pa. An emigrant train of wagons was finding its way across the state, and a supply of tobacco was found at Conestoga.
"The emigrants got a lot of it, but failed to get any pipes and so could not smoke unless they made pipes themselves. Necessity is the mother of invention. You may have heard that remark before. Anyhow one of the men rolled a leaf of the tobacco in his hand and wrapped it with another leaf. That was the first stage. Others followed his example, and they all called the article that they made a 'stogie' in honor of the town at which the tobacco was secured. That is said to be the true story of how the name 'stogie' originated."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Word "Boodle."
Late American dictionaries acknowledge "boodle" as a word. Dr. Murray quotes from an American paper of 1884, "Sineux of war" soap and other synonyms for campaign boodle are familiar." There, however, "boodle" is explained as meaning only "stock in trade," kinship with the Dutch "boedel," a man's stock of business or household goods, being highly probable. Perhaps "boodle," meaning a crowd or pack, as in the phrase, "the whole boodle (or caboodle) of them," is the same word. In that sense "boodle" is found in the early seventeenth century. No doubt it is only a coincidence that there is an old Scotch word "boddie" or "boddie," meaning a twopenny piece, and derived from the name of the mint master Bothwell.

It's Sometimes That War.
She was surprised when she heard of the engagement, and she showed it.
"Why, I was perfectly satisfied in my own mind that you liked Tom better than George," she said.
"Well, to tell the truth, I did," replied the engaged girl.
"But you say you are engaged to George?"
"Yes, that's true."
"Well, I don't understand it at all."
"Why, it's very simple. You see, George was the one who proposed."

When Animals Faint.
The little gray dog tumbled head long into the area, and the maid who happened to be standing there closed the gate. When the dog saw she was safe from her two-legged pursuers she toppled over in a dead faint. At any rate, the maid insisted that she fainted. The boarders, who crowded out into the area to help bring the little animal to, derided the assertion, but the doctor that finally joined the group said there was nothing preposterous about it.
"Of course she fainted," he said. "Lots of animals faint. Cats and dogs and even more stolid animals keel over in moments of fear and exhaustion. In the case of horses the prostration is generally attributed to sunstroke, but quite often they are knocked out by a plain, everyday faint instead of atmospheric excesses. Fowls faint too, and the birds of the air. In fact, it is hard to find any living creature that doesn't topple over in crucial circumstances. If the lioness of the jungle were up on etiquette she would be just as much justified in carrying a camphor bottle as the finest lady to the land."—New York Press.

Trains Porters Given Orders.

All passenger conductors on the Monongah division, B. & O., have received orders from H. R. Laughlin, train master for the division, with headquarters at Grafton, regarding the work in the Pullman cars. The order states by way of explanation that many complaints have been received regarding the practice of porters who carelessly sweep the cars, while the guests are in their berths, raising dust and causing the passengers great inconvenience. The train master orders that greater care must be taken to prevent affording passengers such annoyance.

Now first introducing their new and the only Aerial Stage Acrobatic Act
DEMON-DRIVEN DIAVOLO
Looping the Giant's Loop on a Bicycle. An imitatable, superhuman feat, defying duplication and beguiling description. Which thrills and electrifies as would a battery of dynamite. Acres of astounding, dumfounding, dare-devil, dazed, delightful, marvellous and prodigious and peerless, and rarest living lessons.
A CONSTELLATION OF EIGHT CIRCUS COMPANIES
A hundred acts and rivalries in the ring, 10,000 feet of aerial space, on elevated stages and a grand coliseum course. The Christy Circus of Natural History. The Superlative Circus Troupe of Human Canars. Never before were such her savage representatives in such huge, terrific and varied forms. The Wightest Herd of Wild Elephant, and towering colossally in fame among them THE FOREPAUGH DANCING ELEPHANTS.
THE SELLS BROTHERS' SOLDIER ELEPHANTS.

There are Peerless Hundreds in their Horse Show. A Blue-blooded Congress of Prize-winning Perfection.
The Morning Free Street Pageant is a Gigantic, Glorious Revelation OF ORIENTAL OPULENCE AND HISTORIC MILITARY DISPLAY.

WELLS & HAYMAKER'S DRUG STORE.
The most marvelous medical discovery of the world has ever known, will quickly and permanently cure
RHEUMATISM, CATARRH and all BLOOD DISORDERS. It strikes at the very root of the disease—driving the poison from the blood—and replacing it with pure rich blood. DISEASE can not EXIST when the BLOOD is PURE. LIFE PLANT makes it so, then nature does her part and disease is soon forgotten in the enjoyment of perfect health. Our guarantee is—NO CURE NO PAY.
Mrs. Chas. Spach, of Fifth St., New Philadelphia, O., says: "For three months I had rheumatism in a very severe form. My feet were so badly swollen that they felt as if I were standing on needles. Could walk only with great difficulty and severe pain. The pain was so severe as to give many sleepless hours at night. I tried until I felt LIFE PLANT. Two bottles cured me. I cannot say too much for it."
